

School Teaches Upholstering Arts

21 Indian Students School Teaches Upholstering Arts

By W.A. Knott

Twenty-one Indian students from the reservation at Fort Belknap are attending school at the school in Helena, Mont. They are learning the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

One of Bryce E. Goodwin, instruction.

Mr. Goodwin explains the art of upholstering to the students. He shows them
how to take up the profession
when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

struction and general instruction.

Mr. Goodwin explains the art of upholstering to the students. He shows them
how to take up the profession
when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

The students are being trained by the school in the art of upholstering and are being trained to take up the profession when they return to their homes.

Raymond Yazzie, studying student | Instruction, Bryce E. Goodwin, right, at Intermediate School, shows the | how to hold his well-designed book.

IDENTIFIER

2012.7.63

ARTIST

Jensen, Robert; Yazzie, Raymond; Goodwin, Bryce E.